VLCC

Slowly but surely the July stems come trickling into the VL market. As we cast a cursory glance back at June, it shows a light month with below 140 cargoes. But given the veil of secrecy currently sitting over the market, cargo counting can become a little arbitrary. Still, it is certainly a lighter month, but this is not abnormal, as summer cargo counts are often 10+ cargoes below the cold, dark, Northern winter. Rates have struggled over the week, but are showing signs of levelling out at the WS 50 level for TD3. Indeed, one Chinese charterer at the time of writing only gathering 4 offers for early July dates. Significantly lower than the 10+ offers seen on cargoes last week.

The Atlantic has tightened. Assisted by a recent clear out and owners turning the speeds down to 10-11 knots. Ballasters will therefore take that little longer and we see should be able to halt the slide. USG/ Ningbo staying stubbornly around USD 8.2m.
